THE WELCOME MAT

VOL. 1 / SPRING 2026

[knock knock]

THE WELCOME MAT

VOL. 1 / SPRING 2026

Partying doesn't need to cost you everything
Building a place for conscious hedonists (and what that means)

Is your morning coffee an ethical purchase?
Your new go-to makes coffee that tastes great and you can feel good about drinking.

&

Paris Kemp on sustainable fashion and starting MEDUSA VINTAGE

THE WELCOME MAT

Partying doesn't need to cost you everything

Building a place for conscious hedonists (and what that means)

It's 2 am. You walk out of the club and into the cold street. Time is running out, it'll be lock-out soon, and you're trying to recapture the vibe at pres, but that was so long ago you don't even know if it was real.

Three bars, two clubs, drinks at each, entry fees, surging Uber prices. Your feet hurt, you dtidn't bring a jacket, and you aren't sure when ten friends became three.

You need food, sleep, and for everyone to assure you that it was worth it. That you had the best night ever. That you can have it all: work, good health, ambition, and an enviable social life.

Maybe it didn't use to be this hard. Maybe it just looked easier from the outside.

We inherited this idea of partying from movies, older siblings, and our parents' stories: wild nights out, cheap drinks, no social media. Partying with intention, actually connecting with people, not just chasing clout. Photos taken to remember each other, not to prove to yourself that you have value.

The dream was always the house party. Focused on the people actually around you, not just the ones online.

Intimate, curated, and individual. Every gathering a unique experience, not a copy-paste club with a playlist on loop.

Unfortunately, houses are in high demand, especially in Adelaide. Hoping someone will offer their home as a sanctuary for us hedonists, can feel as wishful as hoping for a living wage. There is refuge in independent venues and bars, but with endless doors to explore, you can be spent by the time you find one to call home.

Be honest. Last time you went out, did it actually live up to the hype? Or did you spend all night trying to convince yourself, and your friends, that you were still having a good time?

"This next club is gonna be the vibe, I promise."

Desperately stealing hours of tomorrow from your future self, because no one will admit that what they are yearning for won't be found around the next corner.

It has to be built.

THE SMALL PRINT

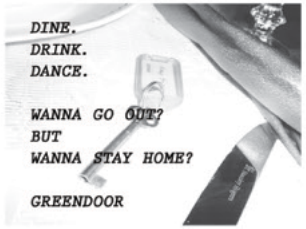

Edited + designed by Elliott Luke for Green Door Community.

Words, photos + contributions by our housemates and collaborators.
@greendoorcommunity · The Welcome Mat on Substack.

We don't know our growers.

Ask us why that's a good thing.

Truly ethical coffee, roasted here in Adelaide.

There is a one-time-use voucher enclosed. Take it to the address hidden on Page 7 for one standard coffee on the house. Truly ethical coffee. Tastes fucking great. Limited to Welcome Mat readers, housemates, and guests.

The voucher is a seperate item, enclosed but not attched to the physical edition of this publication, this page or section can not be redeemed in place of voucher..

BREAKING! HOUSE PARTIES AREN'T DEAD!

They just grew up a little...

[Knock Knock]

[house settles]

THE BLUEPRINT

Our hosts who let us come over and turn their incredible space into our home for the night. Kept us caffeinated during setup, provided the community chest prize (a tin of incredible coffee beans) and are shouting a lucky few of you a coffee on the house next time you visit. (voucher inside, address on page 6)

Paris who created Medusa Vintage, as a way to intervene in the fast fashion cycle. Curating beautiful collections of vintage pieces and finding them loving new homes. She gave us so many great looks on the night and during our NTWI shoot.

All the models/friends who volunteered their time to capture the Green Door energy and showcase some amazing clothes.

Midsection Vintage also pulled some key pieces for the shoot that added to the vibe.

A TOAST! un AFFOGATO!

one of the best additions to our gatherings so far might be the late night Affogato.

Created after the invention of the first espresso machine, an affogato is a heavenly combination of ice cream and velvety espresso, brewed in house by [redacted] (if you know you know) working as a sweet send off, or the perfect pick me up, it delivered the perfect threshold as we transitioned into the final part of the night .

[spoon tapping ceramic]

Using what was left of my decaf/vegan affogato to announce last drinks and thank "everyone who made it out tonight" flowed into Jess' closing set much better than anticipated.

The lights dimmed, everyone was on their feet, the colourful sweeping light illuminating a room full of blissful revellers, arms in the air, cups held tight, determined to dance. Jess gradually brought the volume down, fading into a moving ritual track to release the crowd, a cathartic way to end the gathering, feeling just…right.

[camera shutter click]

COMMUNITY PHOTO ALBUM

Our gatherings aren't staging for marketing or to use the people who come as props or tools.

Guests should be able to come to a gath, put their phone away and just be in the moment.

We share a couple digital and film cameras around to capture the vibe, sometimes we have someone on hand to cover the blind spots (Farzeen Samim/Sam lent their touch most recently) then we upload all the photos to a shared Dropbox folder, but it's only shared with guests of that specific gathering.

If you were there, you can upload your own photos from the night too. Our spaces are a place where you don't have to feel like you are performing for the cameras. We love collaborating and telling visual stories with amazing people, but we like to keep it outside the gatherings…these spaces are for you, not the feed.

You get to live in the moment, and feel safe knowing that your social proof will be waiting for you when you get home.

THE BACK DOOR

It's the beginning of spring, the air is getting sweet, the sun is coming out of hiding and it's getting easier to leave the house.

We hope this means that we will see even more of you at the next gathering, the best part of doing this is meeting so many interesting people and making new friends.

Through all the work that went into gathering III, we made so many new connections and are building relationships that can help lift each other up to make even better experiences for you all.

We plan to keep cultivating spaces for connection, keeping things cost friendly, and intentionally planning nights that you can enjoy that you don't wake up to regret, in other words;

"Conscious Hedonism"

…it means guilt free indulgence.

If you want to come over for the next one, subscribe to The Welcome Mat. We try to keep prices accessible and basically just cover the costs, which means the early release matters.

It helps us build trust with the people we collaborate with, and the spaces that host us.

So if you want to get a seat at the table before it sells out again, subscribe for the first heads up and a good deal as a thank you for pulling up and making what we do possible.

The keys are under the mat.

[door closes softly]

Thanks for coming over.

conscious ['kɒnʃəs]
adjective

1. (of an action or feeling) deliberate and intentional: a conscious effort to walk properly.
• (of the mind or a thought)

hedonist ['hiːdənɪst, 'hɛdənɪst]
noun

1. a person who believes that the pursuit of pleasure is the most important thing in life; a pleasure-seeker: she was living the life of a committed hedonist.

THE GREEN PAGES

[MEDUSA VINTAGE]

Hi! I'm Paris, I'm 24, I live in Adelaide and I run Medusa Vintage.

I got the idea to start selling vintage when I was sixteen. I did my rersearch project on sustainable fashion and I just fell in love with the idea.

During my resarch I learnt that the textile industry is one of the biggest polluters and that really pissed me off.

I was already really into thrfiting becausse I wanted cool clothes but I didn't have money (a tale as old as time.)

Eventually my side hustle became my full time thing. I don't even really know when it happened, but it worked out great for me.

I did go to uni (before you ask) I got two degrees, one was a bachelor of arts-and-global-politics-and-sociology (I don't even really know what sociology is) and the second, was a bachelor of journalism-and-profesional-writing. I actually really love that degreee and I made a lot of cool friends.

I graduated over a year ago and I haven't done shit with it...but it's okay because I've got my business.

With Medusa Vintage the focus has always been on sustainability, I do most of my sourcing locally and we use recyvled or compostable packaging.

I also don't have a super strong focus on brands, we just stock cute stuff.

I live with my boyfriend Austin and our dog Billie. (you've probably seen them at markets) they're my favourtie employees. (but they don't get paid so I guess they're interns?)

My goal with my business is to eventually employ Austin and buy a van so that we can be a bit more mobile and tour.

I'm really big on transparancy, so if you have any questions about the nitty gritty nature of being a reseller, let me know, I'd be so down to asnwer.

I know that this industry is shrouded in a lot of gate-keeping and mystery, but that's really lame and I'm not about that.

So yeah, that's me. You can catch me at vintage markets around Adelaide, on Instagram and my Depop store, or you might find me at another Green Door gath in the future!

THE COUCH

[7:00pm]

It was at this time I found myself perched upon the most wacky and peculiar couch I'd ever seen. Well... perched probably wasn't the right word. More like sprawled, I had made myself completely comfortable. My liquid red platform heels longer than my life span, colour coordinating with the vibrant red wash oozing from the cushioning. I felt I had to apologise for the amount of lipstick stains that littered the chic wine glass. huh guess the lipstick was transferrable. I had always been a fan of people watching, but in this instance I was included. I felt safe. Seen.

As we devoured each others weird sense of humour. Posing for a digicam that was shattered, harbouring blurry stills from its fall.

Complimenting each others fashion, the passionate expressions morphing into one colourful energetic and loud atmosphere. Although, some would say my tiger coat and the couch I now found myself modelling on was too much of a clash.

I danced upon the furniture, not a care in the world as the wine buzzed to my head.

Plates stacked up on a leaning tower. dinner was a hit. I was questioning bringing this swagalicious couch home with me, but wouldn't that be a rude act of thievery?

I felt maternal over this couch. Hugging it, me and this couch were on the same freakish type frequency.

Somewhere in Adelaide

With somewhere to wear it.

- divalicithus [dinner guest]
-
writer, model, radio host

DO SOMETHING GOOD TODAY!

DONATE TO HUTT ST CENTRE!
AND HELP SOMEONE EXPERIENCING HOMELESSNESS

SCAN TO DONATE

Are you experiencing homelessness?

For emergency assistance call Homeless Connect SA on 1800 003 308, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

For crisis support, call Lifeline on 13 11 14, a free, 24/7 service.

If you're going through a hard time right now, call Beyond Blue on 1300 22 4636 a free, 24/7 service.

WELCOME TO THE GREEN DOOR COMMUNITY

The Front Door

[you walk up to a green door and find yourself standing on a doormat: "welcome"]

This is the first issue of The Welcome Mat, a newsletter written by and for the Green Door Community.

Green Door is a place for conscious hedonists: people who seek pleasure, music, beauty, and late nights, but with care, intention, and without sacrificing your ambitions.

It is built for connection, music, and inclusive gatherings that feel like house parties, even when they are not in a house: intimate, intentional, and memorable.

This first issue is a small introduction: who we are, what we are building, why it matters, and how you can be part of it.

Subscribe to receive future editions. You can expect gathering announcements, reflections on nights out, community spotlights, local recommendations, and ways to contribute. A village needs villagers.

We want The Welcome Mat to become a place where people can stay connected between gatherings.

Come over. Stay a while.

The Kitchen

[you join others gathered around the bench]

When you come to a Green Door gathering, we take care of everything we can, so you can focus on enjoying yourself.

Each one is unique, but you can always expect good company, affordable drinks, non-alcoholic options, quality sound, and connective experiences.

Having a night out that is fun without leaving you wrecked is all about balance.

You do not have to give up the night to keep tomorrow.

At our gatherings, that might look like choosing a shot of matcha or strong green tea instead of another energy drink: still caffeinated, but a little softer around the edges.

We gather with purpose and intention: to celebrate, support each other, and share in our collective achievements, big and small, while making sure tomorrow isn't a headache.

The Couch

[you move into the living room and join Elliott on the couch]

In future editions, The Couch will be a place to sit down and talk with different members of the community.

As this is the first, I wanted to share why Green Door matters to me...

I am lucky to have many people in my life who I love, and who I can count on to be there when I need them. But I haven't always felt like that.

Many of us aren't taught the skills needed to maintain relationships outside the structures of school, uni, or work. It can feel isolating when everyone else seems to have this innate ability to connect, while you somehow missed the lesson.

Social media can make that worse. When everyone's front door is reachable instantly, it can be intimidating to knock. You are never sure if you are welcome or just intruding. A quick message can leave you agonising for hours, only to never receive a reply.

Everyone is online, but not always at the same time, in the same capacity, or in the same space. You see photos of friends going to the movies, the beach, town, and it can give you a gut-wrenching feeling that you are being left behind.

It is not that you are unwelcome. Sometimes you are just not an automatic invite. You got lost in the torrential downpour of information. You hear about a party through someone else, get invited on the host's behalf, and say yes while quietly panicking that you somehow invited yourself.

Everyone wants to be the friend who is always doing something exciting with someone interesting. But it can be hard to figure out the mechanics, expensive when you do, and impossible to sustain while juggling everything else in life.

Green Door is for people like you and me, who sometimes find it hard to take the steps needed to get out there, or don't know where to start.

The Backyard

[you step out into the fresh air]

Outside the gatherings, this is where we can share things worth leaving the house for: local gigs, exhibitions, cafés, community projects, volunteer opportunities, and recommendations from people we trust. Refuting the Adelaide-is-boring propaganda.

Leaving the house for:

Illuminate Adelaide is on until the 19th of July, and you don't even have to spend a cent. There are activations around the city every night, and if you want to avoid the weekend crowd, reclaim your week nights! that's your time not your jobs'.

Eating out:

I try to eat somewhere new every chance I get. I recently went to La Pizzaiolo e Pastaio in Mile End and loved the food. The staff were really nice. You have to try the bread. Trust.

Supporting:

Message a friend and tell them they matter to you. No one does this enough. If you think it's cringe, grow up. Just thank someone for being in your life. It doesn't need to be a special occasion. Don't wait for the "right time". Just send it. There's no downside.

Life is too short for mid nights out and wasted next days. If you've never been to a Green Door gathering, this is your sign to come to the next one: alone or with friends. We can try to make a place for us to call home, even just for a night.

Come over.

PS.
If you have something worth gathering for coming up; a birthday, promotion, farewell, creative milestone, or just a win that deserves to be shared, message us.

Green Door grows when people open their circles. We love bringing people together for something worth celebrating.

Castrol
Lotus
F1

[NOWHERE TO WEAR IT]

finding our rhythm

going out on a school night and trying to dance while eating affogato

[boot slams shut]

I'm in the driver's seat, parked in the side street behind ████ ██████ ██████. I look up at the rearview mirror, can barely see out the back, the car is packed to the brim with crates of equipment, vintage clothes and a subwoofer the size of a fridge. I watch a stranger prop his phone up on a stobie pole, and record himself break dancing, after his third take, I decide it's finally time to make the drive home.

I feel spent. but in a good way, like when you buy something expensive that you love, and you know it's worth what you paid. The feeling of an evening well spent…thanks to you.

[knock knock]

THE FRONT DOOR

Thursday 27 August, we hosted: Gathering III [Nowhere to Wear It]

Inspired by the feeling of having 'nowhere to wear it'. A chance to wear something that's been hanging on the rack too long, share a special meal with new friends, and bring back those house party vibes we've been yearning for.

We still have some work to do but we were happy to hear that we hit the right beats and really struck a chord with most of you. We were so thrilled to see how many of you came out on a school night to do something a little different, it meant a lot to us.

Your support is the reason we can keep creating experiences like this and can keep growing.

THE DINNER PARTY

We divided the night into three distinct parts, the dinner party, the house party, and the release.

As everyone took their seats at the table and started to eat the fluffy focaccia and sweet and spicy sides, it felt so natural, that you forgot that only some of the people at the table really knew each other.

The table was set for twelve (plus crew) and we were so stoked to see that we sold out all the seats and even had some people on the waiting list. (if you want early access to tickets next time consider subscribing!)

To actually sit down and eat with you all, passing plates of pulled pork, brisket and smoked cauliflower across the table, eating and sharing stories and laughter, was a truly wonderful way to start the night.

[overlapping chatter and plates clattering]

OPEN PLAN LIVING

After dinner, we clear the tables and dim the lights to set the mood for the more laid back 'house energy' part of the night.

This transition could have been a little smoother…It somehow did not occur to us that anyone would come in the back door and not the front. This led to being caught like a deer in the headlights, mid table-lift, when some (very stylish) guests walked in.

They must have assumed they were interrupting something, because they swiftly turned heel before we managed to flag them down and give them a warmer welcome… (if you are reading this, I promise that a knock on the front door, will lead to a less chaotic entry next time)

Once the dining room fully transitioned however, we started to get our stride back. The lights took on a moodier aspect, a handsome stranger who came through the back door got a slightly less frenzied welcome and a front row seat to an intense game of Jenga occupying a coffee table in the corner. Jess hit the DJ decks, building a living soundtrack to the night, matching and amplifying the energy of the room, as everyone mingled, drank, played games and browsed clothes.

[fabric rustles]

THE WALK IN WARDROBE

You definitely made our gathering somewhere to wear it, you all nailed the brief and brought the best fits and even better vibes.

It was also a lot of fun watching many of you browse through the Medusa Vintage collection we displayed, on laundry racks and in washing baskets. Paris (Medusa creator) gave us so many amazing pieces to work with and I'm only sorry we didn't get to give every single one its deserved spotlight (something to work on next time).

Memorable moments included; talking about a shared love of Fcukers with a guy in a very cool blue/green jacket, and selling a Ralph Lauren quarter zip to someone with the patience of a saint (they had to watch me set up the square app on my phone, I'll have it ready next time).

medusa

THE WELCOME MAT

DO YOU FEEL LIKE YOU BELONG?

the first people in the room

not quite a house party, not quite Friday, but that's the point

[knock. knock]

You want to go out. You want to stay home.

You have the outfit, but nowhere to wear it.

That thing you keep saving for the right occasion. The plans you keep almost making. The people you keep meaning to see. The version of yourself you keep waiting to become when you feel like a night is finally worth all the effort.

Maybe the occasion doesn't arrive. Maybe you make one.

Green Door started because we got tired of waiting for the night we wanted to have, so we decided to try and build it. We are still working it all out, but one thing has become consistently clear: the first people in the room set the tone.

Showing up, stepping through that door when the room is still filling up, takes guts. It can be a lot of pressure. Every new arrival is looking for somewhere to land, someone to talk to, someone to make the room feel a little warmer.

For our next gathering on Thursday 27 August, we are trying something a little different. Something that hopefully makes the beginning of the night more rewarding for the people who always make the effort.

Dinner is the first chapter.

Not an upgrade. An entry point. A beginning.

A small table, a shared meal, a drink on the house, and a chance to meet people before the room gets loud. No standing around wondering if you got the time wrong. No arriving late and feeling like everyone else has already formed their circles.

Dinner is a way in.

We keep the location hidden, we keep the guest list private, we don't post everything on socials, and we chose a Thursday for our next gathering. Yes. We are inviting you out on a school night.

The invite works through the community. You decide who is there with you. Bring the friend who says they never get invited to things. Send the link to someone you want to see outside of the group chat. A friend of a friend is still a stranger to someone, and that is how we keep expanding our circles without diving into the complete unknown.

We keep the door controlled, but not closed.

This gathering is called [Nowhere to Wear It] because that feeling is real. The clothes we save, the plans we postpone, the nights we keep waiting for someone else to organise.

So we decided to stop waiting and make the plans...all you have to do is show up.

Medusa Vintage and Midsection Vintage are helping us make the room worth dressing for, with curated vintage racks and pieces available to buy on the night. Wear the thing you have been saving or find something while you are there.

Dinner Guest is limited to 12 seats for the community. 6 were taken in First Knock. 6 remain for Second Knock. Once they are gone, dinner is full.

If dinner is not your thing, come over later. The night keeps going: drinks, music, vintage racks, dancing, conversations in corners, and whatever else the room decides to become. It is intentionally designed so you can come in and out in a way that works for you.

You do not have to give up tomorrow to have a good night.

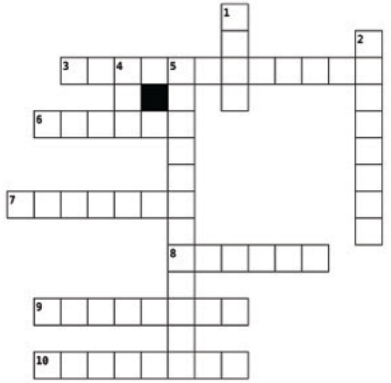

Every single one of you who shows up helps make this real.

Thank you.

Don't forget to knock.

SOLVE THE CROSSWORD FOR THE ADDRESS OF YOUR NEW FAVOURITE COFFEE SPOT

ACROSS

3. The Street Number of Hutt St Centre (digit by digit)

6. Adelaide's Rundle or King William

7. They set up stalls at the Adelaide Central Market, or merchants in a community

8. Popular morning brew

9. The first and only Australian city to be designated a UNESCO City of Music

10. a well known Grammar School in adelaide

DOWN

1. Costing nothing

2. Accepted norm

4. Number of giant public art pigeons in Rundle Mall

5. The junction of Marion and Sturt roads, historically named Adelaide's most dangerous

---

FOUND THE ADDRESS?

Use the enclosed voucher.

One standard coffee. One use only.

Take it to the address revealed above by arranging answers;

4, 1, 2, 8, 5, 7, 3, 10, 6, 9

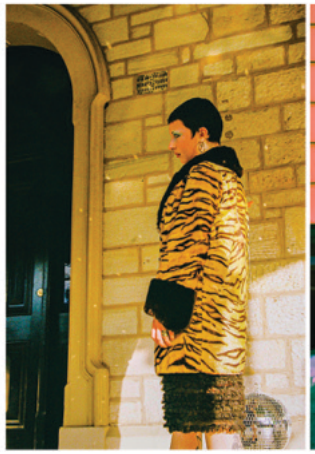

Do You Miss the Feeling of;

- being invited to a new friends house?
- meeting people and actually being able to talk to them?
- going out without emptying your wallet?
- waking up tomorrow without feeling guilty?

sound like one of us?

MEDUSA'S TRUE VINTAGE COLLECTION

shop sustainably at MEDUSA VINTAGE on Depop

Models for the [Nowhere to Wear It] Shoot, dressed by Paris from Medusa Vintage, with additional pieces from Luke at Midsection Vintage